

Shanice Miller

Shanice Miller is a business productivity consultant, specializing in project management, who helps clients ranging from small startups to multi-million dollar businesses save hundreds of hours and thousands of dollars. Her passion for identifying and solving inefficiencies began when she sold her first business, an educational consultancy that had been recognized in Forbes and BET, at a less than premium price point because she didn't have her systems and processes streamlined and documented.

Over the last 10 years, Shanice has used her ability to identify operational inefficiencies and create solutions to not only help save her clients' businesses (and hairlines), but to also fall in love with them again.

Featured On

General Topics

- Project manage your business like a multimillion-dollar company
- Letting go of your ego to delegate (without feeling out of the loop)
- Save time and money by putting your project management on autopilot
- Why clarity meetings are the ONLY type of meeting to regularly host
- Automating quality assurance to maximize client satisfaction
- How using ClickUp can help eliminate the need for an ongoing, high-level PM

Sample Questions

- How can a project management tool save the cost of hiring a high-level project manager?
- What processes should be streamlined first?
- How can projects be managed more efficiently with fewer meetings?
- What milestones in client projects should trigger automations?